New Mexico Corrections Department

Letter from the Secretary

This year, the New Mexico Corrections Department continued to advance our mission of rehabilitation, public safety, and opportunity with measurable success and renewed purpose. Together, we have built one of the most effective reentry systems in adult corrections in the country.

We remain the leading institution in the state for high school equivalency completions among adult learners. Our college partnerships and expanding programming continue to open doors that were once closed. In our facilities, incarcerated craftsmen and entrepreneurs are learning marketable skills and building business plans. We have scaled up technical and vocational programs like never before, preparing individuals for jobs that offer dignity, purpose, and a living wage. These efforts are not just about attaining credentials, they are about rehabilitation and building futures.

In our communities, our probation and parole teams continue to strike the critical balance between public safety and second chances. They have helped remove dangerous actors from the streets while also reducing prison returns by supporting parolees in making a successful transition back to society. This dual mission of accountability and opportunity is the foundation of a safer New Mexico.

The road ahead is filled with opportunity. We are expanding career pathways for releasing inmates, creating new bridges to meaningful employment and independence. We are investing in what works, refining what doesn't, and staying focused on the outcomes that matter most: safer communities, stronger families, and lasting second chances.

Thank you to each and every one of you for making this vision real. Your service is building something remarkable, and I am honored to stand with you in this mission.

In gratitude,

Alisha Tafoya Lucero,
Cabinet Secretary
